HISTORICAL FACT vs. FANCY In a County Historical Society By Ernest H. Rankin, Marquette, Mich.

It is a known fact that fiction is generally much more interesting than the truth -- and usually the consummation of a much better story. One of the primary purposes of an historical society is to collect authenticated historical facts and to sift out from a large accumulation of material the true facts from the many fantasies which are constantly being created by dubious historians. This is not always easy to do. Family folklore, handed down through the generations, becomes so badly distorted with the passing of time that the import of the truth disappears almost completely, and one is confronted with a wonderful piece of fiction. And the better the story teller, the greater becomes the improvement in a well developed fable.

It is the purpose of this article to present a few examples of that which the Marquette County Historical Society has found in its research. Of primary importance to the local history is the recording of the lives of the pioneers and early settlers of Marquette County. They were the men and women who came first, building their homes in the vast wilderness of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan and developing the natural resources. One of the principal purposes of the Society is to develop the true facts of their lives -- separating the truth from the fiction. It is almost impossible to delve into any family history and not discover a few skeletons; however, it is not the purpose of this article to exhume any of them.

Among the first settlers of the village which was to become the city of Marquette were various members of the Graveraet family. Had Henry Rowe Schoolcraft kept a record of the names of his Indian interpreters and canoe men who accompanied him on his several trips along the south shore of Lake Superior, roughly between the years 1820 and 1834, during which time he had been Indian Agent at the Soo and Mackinac Island, it would undoubtedly be discovered that there had been a Graveraet or two among his crew. Schoolcraft's Journal, under date of May 16, 1834, records the following: "Young Robert Graveraet first came to the office in the capacity of interpreter ..." At this time Robert Graveraet, born at Mackinac Island in 1820, was only fourteen years old. He was already a recognized Indian interpreter, as was his father, Henry Graveraet, senior, and possibly several of his older brothers. It is quite evident that the members of this pioneering family had visited the locality several decades prior to the founding of Marquette and were quite familiar with the south shore of Lake Superior.

Who were these Graveraets? The first available knowledge of this family goes back to about the year 1500 when the Nederlands consisted of many feudal communities ruled over by various barons, dukes and earls. The Grevenraads (one of the early spellings of the name) were the advisors or the consulars of these rulers, the source of the name denoting their vocation. These Grevenraads were among the learned men of the country. The first mention of this family occurs in the year 1642, there being a Dutch record of an Abraham Grevenraadt owning land in New Amsterdam. It is evident these Grevenraads were among the early settlers of Manhattan Island, when this growing Dutch village had been in existence for less than two decades. Just as the Dutch housewives were noted for their ability as housekeepers, the Dutch men were famous for keeping their records in order, both civil and church. From 1642 onward, there are hundreds of notations relative to the Grevenraads, as there are to the Dutch in general - marriages, births, deaths, as witnesses and all other vital events including land matters. It has been possible to trace this family up the Hudson River to Albany and Schenectady, across New York State and Lake Erie to Detroit, then on north to Michilimackinac, and finally to Marquette. As these Grevenraads journeyed to the northwest, a matter of many years, the spelling of their name gradually changed and became the Graveraet of today.

It is not known that anyone has ever written a complete history of this Graveraet family. The Marquette County Historical Society has collected approximately 200 pages of notes on this family and it is believed that considerable material remains to be discovered. It is a family with a long, eventful history. However, there have been many short articles prepared on various branches and members of the family; it is in reviewing these we find we must separate fact from fiction if we are to establish the truth.

A high school student, living in the northern part of Michigan's Lower Peninsula, wrote an historical essay on a branch of the Graveraet family from her locality. This particular branch of the family had played a prominent part in their local history and both father and son had given their lives on a battlefield of the Civil War. In her story, she stated, first that the progenitor of the Michigan Graveraets was a German; second, he had fought in the Revolution; and third, he had come to Michigan from Pennsylvania. Exactly three of these statements were incorrect: the Graveraets were Dutch; the one who came to Michigan had not fought in the Revolution; and he came from New York state rather than Pennsylvania. Another Graveraet story, in the Michigan Pioneer Collections, stated that the Christian name of the progenitor of the Michigan Graveraets was Isaac. This caused much confusion until it was developed -- and authenticated -- that his name was Gerritt and that Isaac was Gerritt's father. Gerritt's brother, Henry Graveraet of Albany, had the Revolutionary service attributed to Gerritt.

"The Graveraets later moved to Marquette, Michigan. While living there, one Winter day, Mr. R. Graveraet found on the street a cold and hungry boy, who had run away from some place in Wisconsin. His name was Peter White. Graveraet gave him a home, educated him, and later made him his business manager..." This amazing statement from a recently discovered document will clear itself later in this article.

There are some people who are inclined to believe that it was the Indian, Chief Charles Kawbawgam, who stood on the shore of the lake near Ripley's Rock and welcomed the pioneers who were to make the settlement which became Marquette. From Kawbawgam's testimony before the Supreme Court of Michigan, we learn that he came to Marquette with Bob Graveraet's party. Several other young men, besides Kawbawgam, were in this party. Bob Graveraet had been born and lived on Mackinac Island until he reached manhood; it was quite natural he should have gone to his homesite to enlist the services of young men who were to play their part in the establishment of the new town. Among these eight or nine young Indians and whites was an outstanding lad of eighteen years. About the year 1846, he is found for the first time in the annals of local history as a clerk in a store on Mackinac Island. Undoubtedly Graveraet had known this hard-working, ambitious young fellow on the Island and had great respect for his ability and knowledge. Much credit is due Robert Graveraet for having given to Marquette its respected and distinguished citizen, the Honorable Peter White.

About the only thing Peter White brought with him to Marquette, besides his clothes and his turkey, was a good head and the ability to learn and get along. One thing he failed to bring was his family tree; the little he knew of his family was somewhat fantastic. Among his many accomplishments, Peter White became the outstanding story teller of the town. His stories improved with age and the twinkle in his blue eyes grew brighter, as was his famous punch known for its effectiveness, so were his tales.

Ralph D. Williams, on p. 30 of his The Honorable Peter White (published in 1907), tells us that "Peter White was born at Rome, Oneida County, New York, on Oct. 31, 1830. The Whites had lived at Rome for a great many years and Peter is bound to that town today by ties of great affection. A scene was enacted there that is worthy of a place in the annals of American history, for it was out of his grandmother's petticoat that the first flag of the United States was made. The first recorded legislative action by the American congress in session at Philadelphia for the adoption of the stars and stripes was a resolution offered Saturday, June 14, 1777, as follows: 'Resolved, that the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white: that the union be thirteen stars, woven in a blue field representing a new constellation.'

"Although this resolution was not officially promulgated by the secretary of congress until Sept. 3, 1777, it seems to be well authenticated that the first flag hoisted as the stars and stripes was unfurled by Capt. Stephen White on Friday, Aug. 6, 1777, over Fort Stanwix, commonly known as Fort Schuyler, then the military post on the present site of the city of Rome, Oneida county, New York. This flag was hastily constructed from a soldier's white shirt, an officer's blue overcoat and a woman's red petticoat. Captain Stephen White was Peter White's grandfather and in his zeal to make an emblem for the new republic he employed one of his wife's petticoats."

There it is, in black and white. Betsey Ross, Francis Hopkinson and all the others who are credited with designing the first American flag can be forgotten.

That Peter White had great respect and love for his parents is evidenced by one of his last acts. His father, Peter Quintard White, and his mother, Harriett Tubbs White, had been among the first communicants of Zion Episcopal Church at Rome, which had been organized during 1825. Peter had been one of the incorporators and one of the first vestrymen. What could be more fitting than a memorial tablet erected on the walls of this church by the son to his parents? Again sifting fact from fiction, we quote from a letter to Mr. White, written December 18, 1907, by Mr. Thomas Stryker, an officer of Zion Church, in regard to the proposed tablet:

"... in relation to a memorial tablet you propose to erect in Zion Church in memory of your father and mother ... You may think I have been dilatory ... but I have been very busily engaged in my researches, endeavoring to verify or substantiate the tradition that your grandfather was one of the defenders of Fort Stanwix, and the tradition in relation to his connection with the hoisting of the first flag at Fort Stanwix. While we think it would be entirely proper to record any fact of general historical or local interest, it would not, of course, answer to put anything on the walls of the Church which was not a record of fact, and I am afraid we cannot connect your grandfather, Stephen White (he was Dr. Stephen White, not Captain White), with the defense of Fort Stanwix. I have searched the records, and cannot find in the roster of those at the fort, or from any other source, that there was any Captain Stephen White among its defenders. From the genealogy of the White family, to which I have recently had access, your grandfather, Dr. Stephen White, was born, probably in New England, March 27, 1763, so, of course, he would not have been old enough to have taken part in the defense of Fort Stanwix, or to have been Captain, or married, as he was about fourteen years old when Fort Stanwix was besieged. Your great-grandfather, as I take it from the White genealogy, was Peter White, located in New England. So I think this will have to dispose of the tradition as to his connection with Fort Stanwix."

Here is a concise example of family folklore handed down to a younger generation. No one can blame Peter White. He could only have heard these stories as a young boy. He accepted them in good faith and, insofar as is known, made no extensive research on his White family. The happy point of this episode is: Peter White accepted Mr. Stryker's criticisms; a tablet, with the proper wording, was placed on the walls of Zion Church; and Mr. White died knowing he had accomplished a fitting tribute to his parents.

Last June a local newspaper carried a feature story on the Biddle House Restoration (at Mackinac Island), which story included a "Fabled Romance of Interest". Having made a study of the Biddle family, local history being concerned with several branches of this famous eastern family, the staff members of the Society were quite amazed by the Biddle romance as included in this feature story. Here was the story of Edward Biddle marrying the beautiful Indian princess, Angelique. It should be borne in mind that none of the pioneers, be they French, English, Scotch, or Irish, ever married an Indian of ordinary status. She was ever an Indian princess, the daughter of some great chief. No writer of historical romance, truth or fiction, would have it otherwise. It is well that the headline writer of the newspaper called the Biddle story a fabled romance, for much of it is of very uncertain tradition. The records disclose the fact that Edward Biddle married, during the year 1819, not Angelique, but Agatha de la Vigne. Agatha was born during the year 1798, the daughter of de la Vigne and Marie Le Fevre. Neither of her parents were full-blooded Indians, nor were there any Indian chiefs immediately involved in the several complex French-Indian marriages in this family group. Agatha Biddle bore Edward Biddle seven children, dying at Mackinac Island on the 23rd of March, 1873, at the age of seventy-five years.

With the opening of the Mackinac Bridge, the attention of the world has been brought to the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. Many historians throughout the State of Michigan have taken up their pens to establish the historical background of this little known part of Michigan. Unquestionably these historians have every intent of being honest in their writings; however, many of them fail to consult primary sources and their writings add to the confusion.

Recently, one of the lesser known Michigan historical publications carried an article on the building of the first iron forge on the shore of Lake Superior. The writer gave full credit to Robert J. Graveraet for this accomplishment. This was interesting news to the staff members of the Marquette County Historical Society. They corresponded with the author of this article, asking him for his sources, as they like to know about these things. In his reply he quoted from several secondary sources, one included in a well-known book which had been produced by a well-known college president. The actual record in this matter discloses the fact that the first forge was built, not by Mr. Graveraet, but by Amos R. Harlow, who produced the first iron bloom on July 6, 1850, exactly one year to the day he landed on the shore of Iron Bay.

A New Yorker recently wrote an outstanding family history, a privately printed publication, and, as it made mention of the Harvey family in Marquette, he kindly sent the Society a copy. The immediate local historical interest in this book was the reference to the Rev. Joseph Harvey, the father of Charles Thompson Harvey, of Soo Canal fame. The author, a relative of Mrs. Joseph Harvey (nee Catherine Desiree Selden), had brought the clergyman and his wife to Marquette to live with their son in the late 1820's. This was about twenty years before Amos Harlow, Robert Graveraet, Peter White and others took off their jackets, rolled up their sleeves and took to the task of clearing the Norway pines from the site which was to become Marquette. The author has now been given the facts about Marquette, the local Harveys, and other members of his family who were early settlers in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan -- and he was most grateful for having been set straight in the matter.

The front, or outward manifestation of an historical society is usually its museum. This is what the layman sees, and in many cases covers the full extent of a society's activities. The John Burt House in South Marquette and the Officers' Quarters at Fort Wilkins, subsidiaries of the Marquette County Historical Society, are examples of this. They are purely museums, designed to illustrate how the people of a century ago lived and the things they had to do with. These excellent examples of museum work are due, almost entirely to the untiring efforts of the curator of the Society.

The Marquette County Historical Society has a small but rather complete museum. It is what the visitors generally expect to see, and insofar as they are concerned, or interested, it is the extent of the Society's activities. However, this is not the case. Over and above the effort devoted to maintaining a proper museum, is the far greater effort devoted to historical research which is actually the major activity of the Society, this fact being little known or realized by the public in general. The Society is fortunate in having an outstanding library, known as the John M. Longyear Research Library, containing over eight thousand well-indexed reference works and other materials of historical importance. The exacting library work is carried on by a qualified librarian. All the known copies of the local newspaper are available in the files or on microfilm. This newspaper was established in Copper Harbor during 1846. After two years of publication at Copper Harbor, the paper was moved to Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, and in 1855 was moved to Marquette. There is also an ever-growing index of the pioneers, the early settlers and their descendants, and their activities. The Society receives inquiries on many subjects - the necessary research is done and most of the questions are answered, providing they come within the scope of the local field.

A short time ago a gentlewoman came to the Society from her home in Detroit. She wanted to know about the little mining town of Republic, the place of her birth in 1883. She had left Republic at the age of nineteen and hadn't been back there for many years. Now, unable to journey to Republic itself, she wanted to know something about it in its earlier days, when she was a girl.

Usually a little mining town has little history, other than that of the mines; at best, that would only be a record of the number of tons of iron ore shipped each year, which would hold little interest to this woman. However, a bit of digging in the Society's library brought up the biography of the priest who had married her parents and whom she had known as a child in Republic; other biographies were found of some of her schoolteachers, neighbors and the tradesmen of the town. In this particular case, however, the "big pay-off" proved to be a photograph of the house in which she had been born and where she had lived as a child. Her tears of happiness were an eloquent "thank you" to every member of the Society's staff.

The lasting satisfaction in historical research is not in preserving old rocking chairs and street cars; it does not come from building up accurate histories of mines or securing all the known pictures of stone quarries, to show the development of such industries in a community; it is not composed of a chronology of events or a library about those events. Such, of course, have played their part in history and must be recognized. The historian's real interest is in the people who created the town and its life and its industries and took part in those events -- the pioneers, the early settlers, the families who came -- and have stayed. His greatest reward comes when he is able to tell some descendant of his or her forebears and their activities in shaping the life of the community in its early days; when he is able to help that descendant sift out from the family legends, the fictions and the facts. Many a fact has been found more thrilling in the proving than all of the legend in the telling. He knows his county, his country, his America; his greatest joy is in helping others to know it too.

THE MILLARDS OF REHOBOTH, MASSACHUSETTS

By Frances Davis McTeer of Detroit, Mich. and Frederick C. Warner of North Amherst, Mass.

The early town records of Rehoboth, Massachusetts contain the names Millard, Millerd and Miller used interchangeably -- according to the inclination of the scribe rather than as an indication to identify any one family or individual. Moreover all pre-Revolutionary inhabitants listed in the town's published vital records under any of these three names are found to have been descendants of the John Millard Sr. who was a proprietor of Rehoboth in 1643.

Surprisingly, considering its antiquity and the number of its branches, no comprehensive history of this Rehoboth Millard family in all its ramifications has ever been published; it is to supply this omission that the present compilation undertakes to trace five generations of the male descendants of John Millard as found in the records of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Wherever possible, dates and places of removal are indicated for those sons who moved elsewhere, but practical considerations of time and expense have precluded extensive research in more distant localities. To avoid undue length in the family schedules, data on daughters have been restricted to a listing of spouses, residences and appropriate references.

Before proceeding to the genealogy proper, it is suitable and convenient to review and explain at this point some of the source materials on which it is based. In general, the data presented are derived from six main areas. First. An article entitled "The Millard Ancestry of President Millard Fillmore", written by Franklin H. Giddings and published in 1916 in Vol. 47 (pp. 245-251) of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, deserves the thoughtful consideration of anyone interested in this family. Here, on the basis of Research in Bristol Co., Mass. Wills and deeds, and after a careful re-reading of the original Rehoboth Town Records, the author was able to correct previous errors and omissions in the families of John(1) and Robert(2) Millard and so to lay the groundwork for an accurate genealogy for the family. Subsequent research, as will be shown, has added details and confirmed hypotheses, but has found no important disagreement with Giddings' statements.

Second. The three published histories of Rehoboth have contributed generously to the biographies of John(1), his sons and grandsons. Regrettably, in his History of Rehoboth, Mass., written in 1836, Leonard Bliss Jr. had misread the name "Joh Miller Jr." in an allotment list of 1668 as "Ichobod Miller" and thereby brought into being a sixth, but actually non-existent, son for John Miller Sr. Even now, in spite of Giddings' refutation more than fifty years ago, the erroneous Ichabod continues to haunt the Millard genealogist. The second History of Rehoboth, Mass., by George H. Tilton, was published in 1918. The third, and by far the most comprehensive and authoritative, account of the town is found in the four volumes of Early Rehoboth, published 1945-1950 by Richard LeBaron Bowen.

Material from these four publications, designated hereafter by the authors' names, viz. Giddings, Bliss, Tilton and Bowen, has been summarized in the Millard biographies which follow, but in order to conserve space for newer discoveries, detailed repetition of already published data has been largely limited to instances of error, discrepancy or ambiguity where a further evaluation of evidence seemed called for.

Third. Town records of births, deaths and marriages have been an invaluable source of precise dates and locations -- first in Rehoboth, then in surrounding Massachusetts towns, throughout Rhode Island, and wherever else the Millards located. For many of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island towns these records are in print, but in several instances recourse to manuscript compilations or to the original books in the office of the Town Clerk was necessary.

Connecticut Town Records are found in the State Library at Hartford. There also the original papers for the early probates of Connecticut are on file, and early deeds are available on microfilm. These three sources have been checked for those towns to which Millard descendants are known to have migrated.

When available, gravestone inscriptions have proved a valuable addition to the data from official town records -- notably "Inscriptions in Kickemuit Cemetery, Warren, R.I." as published in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Vol. 70, 1916 (pp. 25-33) and "Burials at Warren and Barrington, R. I." in The Register, Vol. 48, 1894 (pp. 442-444). Other uses of supplemental vital records are noted as they occur.

Fourth. Court records, wills, deeds, probates and the like, have been used throughout the history to provide conclusive proof of marriages and relationships. With the Millards living in Rehoboth, research in court records was peculiarly complicated by the history and geography of southeastern Massachusetts.

From its founding as "Seaconk" in 1643 until its annexation to the Colony of Massachusetts Bay in 1692, the area between Taunton and the Providence River (later designated as Rehoboth) was legally a part of Plymouth Colony. Many court records dealing with Rehoboth's inhabitants during this period have been published in the twelve volumes of Old Plymouth Colony Records; some very early Rehoboth deeds are abstracted in Bowen (Vol. III); and still other deeds and probates are available at the Registry in Plymouth, Mass.

After the consolidation of 1692 Rehoboth was located in Bristol Co., Mass., whose deeds and probates are now filed in Taunton. Likewise, those portions of early Rehoboth which were set off as Swansea in 1668, as Attleboro in 1694, and as Barrington in 1717 were also included in Bristol Co., Mass.

In 1746, however, a much more drastic boundary change occurred in the Rehoboth area. The west part of Attleboro, as the Town of Cumberland, the west end of Swansea, as the Town of Warren, and most of Barrington were annexed to Rhode Island by Royal Decree. In the latter colony deeds and probates were (and are to this day in the State of Rhode Island) filed, not by counties as in Massachusetts, but with the clerks of the individual towns -- a serious multiplication of travel and time required for genealogical investigation!

From the foregoing very brief resume of the governmental changes which beset Rehoboth during her first century of development, some of the difficulties and complications of the Millard research become apparent. In several cases court records are known to have been lost by fire or in transit from one locality to another; land descriptions vary markedly from date of purchase to date of sale; and a man who spent all his life within a few miles of his birthplace might easily be born in one town, marry in another, die in yet another, and then be buried across the line in another colony.

Fifth. For extraordinary assistance in abstracting and collecting the Millard records of Rhode Island the genealogy is indebted to The Rhode Island Historical Society in Providence, which made available two large manuscript volumes containing genealogical data relating to at least five different Miller families. This material, collected between 1912 and 1942 by the late Clarence E. Peirce of Springfield, Mass. and East Providence, R.I., is relatively unorganized -- on loose sheets, assembled alphabetically by given names of Millers rather than by Miller family lines, but it does include vital statistics and abstracted court records from practically every town in Rhode Island. In addition Peirce had copied gravestone inscriptions, now illegible, and had corresponded with Miller descendants.

By checking names of knowns of the Rehoboth Millard family against Peirce's individual data sheets, it was possible to research Rhode Island in a few days rather than in the weeks or months which would have been required to visit all the towns one by one.

Sixth. Inevitably in so old and extensive a family as the Millards, individual lineages, families and members have been mentioned frequently in local histories and in genealogies of other families. So far as available these incidental mentions have been consulted and the data culled therefrom, with complete references, included in their relevant positions in the text. In addition, several interested descendants in various lines have been kind enough to share their individual discoveries and family data as indicated.

The information from all these sources has been collected, evaluated, and then combined to establish relationships within and between the various families descended from the original John Millard Sr. and to provide so far as possible at least some biographical data for the head of each family.

FIRST GENERATION IN AMERICA

1. JOHN (1) MILLARD, b. in England, d. in Rehoboth, Plymouth Colony, between 30 June 1684 and 7 Feb. 1689; m.(1) in England,; m. (2) in New England, ELIZABETH , who was buried in Rehoboth, 18 April 1680.

Evidence regarding the two marriages of John Millard Sr. is inextricably entangled with the data regarding his children. No records have been found of the identity of either wife, or the date and place of the marriages. As a matter of fact, the multiplicity of John Millards, father, son and grandson, in the early records of Rehoboth has raised some doubts as to whether the Elizabeth who died in 1680 was really the spouse of John Sr. at all; John Jr. also had a wife Elizabeth. (Giddings, p. 248) Happily this question is now settled. In a deed of 4 March 1679/0. John Miller, Sr. of Rehoboth, tanner, conveyed to his son Samuel Miller his house and home lot, salt marsh in the Hundred Acres, likewise fifty pounds of commonage in Rehoboth, the son Samuel to fully possess all "except if my beloved wife Elizabeth doeth outlive me"; then was to have one half the house, orchard and lands during her natural life, and after her death Samuel to have all. Witnesses: John Miller Jr. and the mark of Hannah Miller. (Plymouth Colony Deeds Vol. 4, p. 354; Bowen, Vol. III, p. 163) This instrument was acknowledged by John Millard Sr. on 12 April 1680, just six days before Elizabeth's burial!

From this evidence John Sr. did certainly have in 1680 a wife Elizabeth. Furthermore, on 2 Oct. 1684, "Elizabeth Millard Relict of John Millard" Jr. made oath to the truth of the inventory of her husband's estate. (Plymouth Colony Wills, Vol. 4, Pt. 2, p. 75; see #3 hereafter) Since the Elizabeth who was the wife of John Jr. was yet living in 1684, the evidence is overwhelming that it was indeed Elizabeth wife of John Sr., who was buried in 1680.

According to the town records of Rehoboth, John Millard Sr. had five children born there between 1653 and 1662, presumably by his wife Elizabeth. In addition there were two older Millard boys living in the town: Robert who was born about 1632, according to his gravestone which says he died in 1699, "age 67 years"; and John Jr. who was entered on the Rehoboth tax roll of 1657, indicating that he was born at least by 1636. These two have posed a genealogical problem; in the words of Giddings, "There is no proof beyond circumstantial evidence that John Millard Jr. and the first Robert Millard were sons of the first John Millard Sr.; but neither is there the slightest reason to doubt that they were." (p. 248)

That statement was written fifty years ago; today we need not be so cautious. On 30 June 1684, John Miller of Rehoboth, tanner, "for good grounds moving me thereunto and out of love and affection to my son Robert Miller of Rehoboth, Tanner, have many years since given, granted, alined ... and by these presents give, grant, alien and assign forever to said Robert Miller, his heirs and assigns ... as his and their rightful inheritance. To be holden after ye maner of East Greenwich in ye County of Kent in England"; fifty pounds commonage in Rehoboth, nine acres, "part of it being a part of his homestead", two divisions of upland, "laid out since this gift, one being in ye two thousand acre Division", ten acres at Chestnut Hill, and eight acres at Wachamokett Neck. Witnesses: Samuel Miller, William Carpenter. (Plymouth Colony Deeds, Vol. 5, Pt. 2 p. 275).

In this and other deeds of the period, the expression, "To be holden after ye maner of East Greenwich in ye County of Kent in England" was a legal cliche referring to the fact that such lands were grants from the Crown. The same wording, derived from the fact that a royal residence was located for many years at East Greenwich (now a part of London), occurs in a number of the early colonial charters. There is no implication that either the grantor or the notary who drew up the deed had any personal acquaintance with East Greenwich.

The evidence that John Millard Jr. was a son of John Sr. is less clear cut than in the case of Robert but circumstantially impressive nevertheless. The date of the conveyance just quoted from John Miller of Rehoboth to his son Robert is significant in this connection; it was drawn up ten days after the inventory of John Jr. Presumably John Sr. had given each of these sons his inheritance "many years since", but no formal deeds of gifts had been recorded. Perhaps this omission had proved a hindrance in the appraisal of John Jr.'s estate; so the father then hastened to confirm his gift to the surviving son by his first wife.

Further indications that John Jr. was in fact a son of John Sr. are found in the following data: from 1657 until 1684 the two Johns were always designated as Senior and Junior; whereas earlier while the younger John was still a minor and later after John Jr.'s death, the older man was listed simply as John Miller. In 1680 John Miller Jr. was a witness, with John Sr.'s daughter Hannah Miller, to the deed of inheritance from John Sr. to his son Samuel. It was not unusual for other heirs to witness such deeds of gifts, as instanced by Samuel's signature as a witness to the 1684 conveyance from John to his son Robert. (See above.)

However, with Robert and John Jr. now established as sons of John Millard Sr., another problem arises. It seems very unlikely that the wife Elizabeth whose son Benjamin was born in 1662 was also the mother of Robert born thirty years earlier. To avoid this physiological anomaly, to explain more logically the great disparity between the ages of the two older sons and John's later children, and to account for the very considerable hiatus between John's known arrival in Rehoboth and the birthdates of his recorded children, the following hypothesis is formulated: John Millard, with a wife and family including two small sons, probably came to New England about 1637 at the same time as his kinsman who settled in Boston. By 1643 John was established in Rehoboth, but he was then probably a widower since he had no children recorded during his early years in the town. About 1652 he married Elizabeth who died in 1680. It is true no direct evidence has been found to support this theory; perhaps none can ever be discovered. But conversely, there is no evidence to discourage, and considerable logic to support, the contention that John Sr. must have had two wives.

During more than four decades John Millard Sr. was a taxpayer and landowner, identified with the community of Rehoboth. As early as 1643 he was referred to as a proprietor and named seventeenth in the list of estates. Thereafter his name appears in succeeding years in connection with land allotments in "the woodland between plain and town"(1644), "the great plain beginning on the westside"(1645), the new meadow(1646), and the meadows on the northside of the town(1658). In 1648 he was "Servayer for the Hyewayes for Rehoboth" and constable in 1672. The town assessments of 22 Dec. 1657 list John Miller Sr., together with his two sons, John Jr. and Robert, and the following year both Johns took the Oath of Fidelitie there. Ten years later the same three Millers were among those who drew lots for the "meadow lands in the North Purchase"(now Attleboro, Mass.). (Bliss, pp. 27, 31, 34, 41, 49, 67; Bowen, Vol. I, pp. 16, 39, 41; Plymouth Colony Records, Vol. 5, pp. 91, 115; Vol. 8, p. 178)

In addition to these dates from Rehoboth and from Plymouth Colony records, some further information on John Millard Sr. is found in the estate settlement of his "cousin" Thomas Millard of Boston. Cousin was a somewhat broader term in the seventeenth century than it is today, the exact relationship between the two men is not indicated in the records. Thomas came to New England in 1637 and settled in Boston, where on 7 Sept. 1639 he was designated a husbandman and allowed "a great Lott at Muddy River for 15 heads". (Report of the Boston Record Commissioners, Vol. II, p. 42) Through the years he evidently kept in touch with John of Rehoboth; so in 1669, when Thomas was taken sick and died suddenly before he could make a will, his friends sent word to John, and the latter came at once to Boston, even in the middle of winter.

At a hearing in Suffolk County Probate Court, on 4 Feb. 1669/0, several friends and neighbors of the deceased Thomas Millard testified as to his wishes regarding his estate: "He would give ... his land at Centry Hill ... to his kinsman at Seaconk who hath many children"; "he would give his estate to his cousin Millard because he was brought up at his father's house"; "he intended cousin Miller should have good part of his estate ... because 'I have no other kindred in the country nor certainly do know that any other is alive'". (Suffolk Co., Mass. Probates, Vol. 7, p. 18; New Series, Vol. 3, pp. 279-281; abstracted in NEHG Register, Vol. 48, 1894, p. 326).

The estate referred to in this testimony consisted principally of two lots in Boston. One of these, described in the inventory as "a small parcel of land lying on the side of Century Hill and fronting the Common", was in fact almost the whole of the lot upon which the State House now stands, a half acre of which was Millard's by allotment and an additional acre bought of Zaccheus Bosworth in 1651. (Report of the Boston Record Commissioners, Vol. V, pp. 116-117) Thomas also owned a half-acre lot near the South Meeting House, in connection with which property the Administrators of his estate were sued by Gamaliel Waite. At a court hearing, on 25 Feb. 1671/2, Waite, an abutting property owner, claimed that Millard in replacing the fence around his lot had included land which belonged to Waite's lot and that the land so appropriated was now included in the inventory of Millard's estate. Apparently Waite lost his case, as no judgment was shown against the estate. (Supreme Judicial Court of Suffolk County, Mass., Case #1092).

On the same date as the probate hearing, "John Miller of Rehoboth in ye Colony of Plymouth and John Lake and Thomas Bligh of Boston" were appointed administrators of the estate of "ye late Thomas Miller of Boston"; these three immediately, that day, gave a bond "unto Edward Ting Esqr Treasurer of ye County of Suffolk in the Sm of Foure hundred and twenty pounds". John's own signature to this bond, which he signed in Boston, on 4 Feb. 1669/0, is here reproduced to show that John himself wrote his name Millard, ending with an emphatic, old-fashioned two-stroke "d". In this connection it is interesting to note that the wording of the bond, written by the scribe or clerk, used the name Miller for both the administrator and the deceased, even though the former's signature was clearly Millard. A similar ambiguity is found in other records. (Original documents in Suffolk Co., Mass. Probate File #517).

This appointment of John Millard of Rehoboth as one of the administrators of the estate of Thomas Millard of Boston seems to imply his acceptance as next of kin and legal heir. However, on 18 Oct. 1672, John Lake and Thomas Bligh, "Administrators of the estate of Thomas Millard late of Boston", deeded the two lots in Boston to Col. Samuel Shrimpton, "Attorney for Alice Swift, Sister and Executrix unto the last Will and Testament of said Thomas Millard deceased". The following spring, when travelling was less hazardous, John Millard made another trip to Boston. On 23 June 1673, John Millard of Rehoboth, Tanner, one of the Administrators of the estate of Thomas Millard late of Boston, "in consideration of all the household goods and movables and money that Thomas died possessed of and twenty pounds in money additional" quitclaimed the Boston real estate to Samuel Shrimpton, merchant, "Attorney for Alice Swift". Acknowledged the same day before Edward Tying. Finally, on 23 Feb. 1673/4, the administrators Lake and Bligh acknowledged that possession of the property was delivered because the estate had then been recovered out of their hands. (Suffolk Co., Mass. Deeds, Vol. 8, pp 308, 309).

Three years later, on 21 Oct. 1676, Samuel Shrimpton and wife Elizabeth for £350 sold to Peter Sergeant of Boston, merchant, the lot near the South Meeting House which belonged to Thomas Millard late of Boston deceased. (Ibid., Vol. 10, p. 144) There is now no deed in the Suffolk County archives to show when or to whom Col. Shrimpton disposed of the lot on Century Hill, which was still in his "tenure" in 1679. In his essay on the title to the State House lot, written in 1855, Nathaniel Ingersoll Bowditch concludes with the pious hope that Col. Shrimpton, being a man of honor, "dealt fairly with Miss Alice Swift and did not keep for his own that which he received ... merely as her attorney". (Report of the Boston Record Commissioners, Vol. V, p. 117).

Superficially the deeds to Shrimpton seem to belie Thomas Millard's deathbed assertion that aside from John of Rehoboth he had "no other kindred in the country nor certainly do know that any other is alive". But there is no evidence whatever that Alice (Millard) Swift ever came to New England; the two and one half years which elapsed between Thomas's death and the deed to her attorney strongly suggest that during that interval she was notified in England, probably by "Cousin" John who would know where to look for her even though neither he nor her brother were sure she was still alive after more than thirty years. It is possible that John also made arrangements with Col. Shrimpton, a Boston merchant, to act as agent to sell the lots and transfer the proceeds overseas; and the nearby presence of Cousin John provides a further guarantee of the honorable conclusion of the business. There is no Power of Attorney in this case now on file and nothing in the Suffolk County records referring to a court hearing on the matter. The "Will" mentioned to bolster Shrimpton's authority and Alice's kinship must have been written before Thomas left England in 1637.

In his review of these estate proceedings, Giddings came to the deduction that "the noncupative will (of Thomas Millard) was contested by Samuel Shrimpton, Attorney for Alice Swift". (p. 247) A careful investigation of the papers in the original Probate File #517, the testimony in the Suffolk Co. Probate hearing, the record of Case #1092 of the Supreme Judicial Court, the Reports of the Boston Record Commissioners, and the various deeds involved in the settlement shows no evidence of a contest. Actually John's conduct in the affair seems very generous. Either he felt himself well endowed with this world's goods in his situation at Rehoboth, or else he had reason to suppose that his relatives in England were in somewhat adverse circumstances. By the testimony at the original court hearing John was designated his cousin's principal heir, yet in return for the "movables" and the small sum of twenty pounds he relinquished to Alice Swift all his claim to two valuable city lots.

The last appearance of John Millard Sr. in the Plymouth Colony records is his acknowledgment on 30 June 1684 of the deed to his son Robert. (Plymouth Colony Deeds, Vol. 5, p. 278). On 7 Feb. 1689 in a List of Inhabitants and Proprietors of the Towne of Rehoboth the name of John Millard is conspicuously absent, though his family is represented by Sam'l Millerd Senr, Sam'l Millerd Junr, Robert Millerd Senr, Joseph Millerd and Benjamin Millerd. (Bowen, Vol. I, p. 56). It is therefore presumed that John Sr. had died sometime between these two listing dates.

In the genealogy which follows, the surname Millard has been used consistently for two reasons: the founder of the Rehoboth family so wrote his name, and the common occurrence of this spelling in early deeds and probates serves to distinguish his descendants from other "Miller" families including those of Middleboro and Yarmouth. In accordance with this policy the last name Millard is used hereinafter for all family data, except in the case of those descendants who themselves adopted other spellings. However, despite the deliberate uniformity of spelling which has been observed in the genealogical summaries, in the biographies every effort has been made to preserve the orthography of contemporary documents, and in the court records, whether presented in abstract or in quotation, all proper names are shown in their original spelling.

John Millard Sr. had two sons who were presumably children of his first wife, probably born in England:

- 2 i ROBERT, b. ca. 1632.
- 3 ii JOHN, b. at least by 1636.

John Millard Sr. and Elizabeth, who was probably his second wife, had five children, born at Rehoboth:

- iii Hannah, b. 23 Dec. 1653; m. (1) at Rehoboth, 16 Dec. 1681, as his second wife, Daniel Thurston, b. at Dedham, Mass., 6 May 1646, d. at Rehoboth, 23 July 1683, son of John and Margaret Thurston. One child. He m. (1) Mariah, who died at Medfield, Mass., 21 May 1680. Hannah m.(2) at Rehoboth, 4 July 1689, as his second wife, Silas Titus, b. there 18 May 1656, d. 1741, son of John and Rachel Titus. Two children. He m.(1) 23 Oct. 1679, Sarah Battelle of Dedham, who d. 8 Apr. 1689; he probably m.(3) at Rehoboth, 24 Jan. 1716/7, Mehitable Ormsbee. (Thurston Genealogies, 1892, by Brown Thurston, p. 362; The Titus Family in America, n.d., by Rev. Anson Titus Jr., pp. 4-5).
- iv Sarah, b. 15 Oct. 1655, d. at Rehoboth, 10 Mar. 1731/2; m. there 3 July 1678, as his second wife, John Titus, b. there 18 Dec. 1650, d. there 2 Dec. 1697, son of John and Rachel Titus. Eight children, born at Rehoboth. John Titus m. (1) at Rehoboth, 17 July 1673, Lydia Redwey b. there 30 May 1652, bur. there 25 Nov. 1676, dau. of James Redwey. (Bowen, Vol. I, pp. 133,136).
- 4 v SAMUEL, b. 5 Oct. 1658.
- vi Joseph, b. middle of August 1660. The Joseph Millard listed on 7 Feb. 1689 among the Inhabitants and Proprietors of Rehoboth was certainly this son of John Sr., but there is little data to indicate what became of him after that date. Possibly he was the Joseph Millard who is shown in the published church records of Windham, Conn. as a communicant sometime later than 1700 but earlier than 1726, when his brother Benjamin Millard and wife Lydia were listed as members of this same congregation. However, there are no vital statistics, deeds or probates recorded in Windham for this Joseph Millard. The evidence to date suggests the possibility that both Joseph and Benjamin moved to Connecticut, but Joseph died or was killed there, before he had children of his own; whereupon Benjamin named his only son for his deceased brother. (See #5 Benjamin hereafter.)

In 1860 they went to Lyndon, near Presque Isle, Aroostook County. He cleared a farm, built a log cabin, and there their son was born. After the death of her husband in the Civil War, Abby Day returned to her birthplace, the Rowell house (#C) in Livermore, for the rest of her life. She used to tell her granddaughter that she remembered seeing Elisha Smith, or "Grantha Smith" as she called him, with his cane passing the house every day on his way to visit his little great-great-granddaughter, Ellen S. Luce (See #14). The distance from the Smith-Wyman place (map, #E) must have been about two miles, quite a walk for a man eighty-nine years old.

CENTRAL METHODIST CHURCH RECORDS, DETROIT, MICHIGAN

Copied from the Original Records by
Mrs. W. Dale Perkins and Mrs. Raymond H. Millbrook

Historians do not seem to agree as to which itinerant Methodist circuit rider organized the first congregation in the Detroit area in 1810. One authority names the Rev. Wm. Case, another, the Rev. Wm. Mitchell. The first seven members were Robert Abbott and wife Elizabeth, William McCarty and wife Mamia C., William Stacey and wife Betsey and Sarah Macomb. Membership increased to 30 before the War of 1812, when the congregation suffered the destruction and demoralization of that period, although Mr. Abbott and Mr. McCarty kept up the services as well as possible. In 1815 the Rev. Hickox, another circuit rider, revived the organization. The center of the Methodist persuasion seems to have been to the west of Detroit and the first log church building was built in 1818 on the Rouge in what is now Dearborn. The first Methodist Church built in Detroit was a brick one erected on Gratiot Avenue in 1826 by the First Methodist Society, which had been organized March 21, 1822. This is the first actual record of the organization that became the Central Methodist Church of Detroit. The oldest record book now possessed by the church is dated 1841 and in the list of members there is inscribed the names of those Methodist pioneers, Robert Abbott and wife Elizabeth.

As in many struggling pioneer societies the church records were rather carelessly kept and for long periods no baptisms or marriages were recorded. All those to be found up to 1870 have been transcribed.

The list of members has been copied from the first book, 1841-1855. A number of these names seem to have come from an earlier book. Members were received by letter, on trial, on probation or as in full communion. The dates copied were those of the first contact of the person with the church. In some cases no dates were entered. In some lists, the status of the member was given as single (S) or married (M). The recorder at times entered random comments such as of marriages and deaths.

PROBATE COURT RECORDS OF OAKLAND COUNTY, MICHIGAN

Abstracted & contributed by Alice D. Serrell, Rochester, Mich.

All records of Oakland County will and administrations -- as well as guardianships, both for minors and for incompetents -- are filed in the Probate Court at the County Courthouse in Pontiac, Michigan. The number preceding the name is the File Number. The complete files often (though not always) show the names of heirs and other relatives, place of residence, value of the estate, etc.

Abstracts of the first 341 probate records of Oakland County were published in The DSGR Magazine, vol. 20, pp 67-72 and 115-120, in the Winter 1956 and Spring 1957 issues. This is a continuation of those records. The contributor is grateful to Mrs. Florence Doty, Deputy Probate Register, and her staff for the wonderful cooperation they have given in the compilation of these records.

THE IDENTITY OF TAM SIN (TAMMY) READ, WIFE OF WILLIAM EASTMAN OF GRANBY, MASS.

Contributed by F. C. Warner, North Amherst, Mass.

The History and Genealogy of Deacon Joseph Eastman of Hadley, Mass. (1909) by Gay S. Rix of Concord, N.H., states on page 35 that William Eastman was born at Granby 20 Nov 1763, son of William Eastman, who died 20 July 1793, and his second wife, Elizabeth Mosely. William Jr. married, first, Tammy Read, born in 1770, died 21 June 1808 at Granby. William and Tammy (Read) Eastman were parents of Tammy Eastman, b. 1801, who married 25 June 1829 Daniel Dickinson of Amherst, Mass.

The Descendants of Nathaniel Dickinson (1955) compiled by Addie M. Dickinson and The Dickinson Family Assn., says on page 292 that Daniel⁶ (Azariah^{5,4}, Samuel³, Nehemiah², Nathaniel-1) Dickinson, born 18 June 1798 at Amherst and died there 25 Dec 1874 married as his second wife on 25 June 1829 Martha (Tammy) Eastman of Granby, who died 15 Oct 1887 at Amherst. Daniel and Tammy (Eastman) Dickinson were grandparents of Edwin Harris Dickinson, born at Amherst 21 Dec 1905, who married Lydia L., daughter of Arnold A. Nickerson of Cape Porpoise, Maine.

Neither the Eastman or Dickinson genealogies identify the ancestry of Tammy Read, wife of William Eastman of Granby. The E. Harris Dickinson family of North Amherst has a collection of old letters which has been passed down in the family. Among these are letters addressed to Miss Tammy Read of Western, Mass., Capt. William Eastman of Granby and Miss Tammy Eastman of Granby.

On 27 Jan 1794, Nathan Read of Salem, Mass., wrote to his sister, Miss Tammy Read of Western, a letter in which he said, "I am happy to hear of your prospects of being so agreeably settled in life -- Miss B. Pyncheon has given me a very good character of the Gentleman and I sincerely wish you & him every felicity that can result from the marriage state." On 17 Aug 1794, a friend Sophia ----, living in Monson, Mass., wrote to Miss Tamma Read in Western, saying, "Please to give my cincearest respects to your Parents, compliments to Mr. Eastmon, My regards to your Brothers and Sisters."

Western was the early name for what is now Warren, Mass. The published Warren vital records show that Reuben Read married, int. 3 Nov 1754, Tamsin Meacham of Enfield (Conn.). Among their eight children were Nathan, born 2 July 1759, and Tamsin, born 25 Dec 1769. The records also show that Tamsin Read married 5 Sept 1794 Lt. William Eastman of Granby.

In the will of Major Reuben Read of Western, dated 6 Jan 1800 and probated 7 June 1803, he bequeathed to wife Tamsin; to sons Levi, Reuben, Nathan, Nathaniel and Joshua; to daughter Elizabeth Foster, widow, of New Braintree; and to daughter Tammy Eastman. (Worcester County Probates) From the above facts, it is evident that Tammy Read, wife of Capt. William Eastman, was a daughter of Reuben and Tamsin (Meacham) Read of Warren, Mass. Reuben Read was a Major in the Revolution.

The ancestry of Major Reuben Read is incorrectly shown in The History of the Read Family (1861) by Jacob W. Read, as: 1/ Elias Read of Woburn; 2/ Thomas Read, died 25 July 1659 Sudbury; 3/ Thomas Read, mar. Mary Bigelow; 4/ Thomas Read, mar. Mary Wood; 5/ Thomas Read, mar. (1) ----; 6/ Nathaniel Read, mar. Phebe Lamb; 7/ Reuben Read.

The correct line is: 1/ Thomas Read; son of Thomas Read, carpenter, of Colchester, co. Essex, England, whose will dated July 1665 mentions his "son Thomas now living in New England in America"; first mentioned in Sudbury, Mass., as early as 1654; m (1) Catherine ----, who died 26 Sept 1677 in Sudbury. 2/ Thomas Read; born about 1649; mar. 30 May 1677 at Sudbury, Mary, born 15 Dec 1650, died 2 Oct 1724 Sudbury, dau. of John Goodrich. 3/ Thomas Read; born 22 Mar 1677/8 Sudbury; mar. (1) at Watertown 3 Dec 1701 Mary (Bigelow) Bruce, born Watertown 12 Sept 1677 died 21 Feb 1707/8 at Sudbury, dau. of Samuel and Mary (Flagg) Bigelow and widow of David Bruce of Marlborough. 4/ Nathaniel Read; born Sudbury 6 Oct 1702; died at Warren 9 June 1785; mar. (int.) 2 Nov 1729 at Leicester, Phebe Lamb, born Framingham 2 Mar 1708/9, died Warren 10 Sept 1788, dau. of Jonathan & Lydia (Death) Lamb. 5/ Reuben Read; born Brookfield 2 Nov 1730; died Warren 26 May 1803.

SOME NOTES ON INDEXING AND CATALOGING

Someone has said: "It is not possible to know the answers to everything -- but it is possible to know where to go to find the answers." The index which helps us to find the answers more readily is especially helpful in the field of genealogy. There are many indexes in daily use in libraries -- excellent, helpful, known to genealogists the world over. The interested amateur just starting on his ancestral trail does not always know about these aids. How can we help save his time? Here are some suggestions.

Indexing is a long, tedious job, which many authors have side-stepped in the past, while attempting to "get by" with a Table of Contents in the hope (perhaps) that readers would be able to scan through the volume and, with a quick eye, locate the information desired. Today, most authors are indexing their books and many foresighted laymen, seeing the growing need for the index, are taking their time to index books heretofore neglected by their authors. Time spent studying indexes and catalogs "pays off" for the amateur.

First, he needs to familiarize himself with the index catalog in the library where he is working. Since cataloging is an exact science and the subject of careful study by every librarian, most catalogs are similar in form. Let's look at what we can find in the catalog of the Burton Historical Collection in the Detroit Public Library. For more than forty years, Burton has been adding to its index catalog, handy to the visitor in the first alcove next the main entrance to the Reading Room. Here are found indexes ...

1. To every book in the Burton Collection, by author, by title and by subject;
2. The Michigan Biographical Index;
3. Of genealogies and local histories, by family name, for all significant entries;
4. Of vital records, arranged geographically;
5. Of maps and atlases;
6. To military records, arranged chronologically, by wars or periods of service;
7. And an "Anonymous" index.

While the library staff does not do genealogy work, they will help interested persons get started on their own family research. No books are circulated from the Collection, but are used in the Reading Room. A reader is also available for microfilms.

After the searcher has used the catalog, other indexes which may be helpful include:

The American Genealogical Index by Fremont Rider, arranged alphabetically. The 48 volumes of the first series are being greatly expanded in the second series, with 25 volumes published thus far, through "Cartist". Be sure to read the helpful suggestions at the beginning of each book, under the title "Some Hints on Using This Index."

Index to Genealogical Periodicals by D. L. Jacobus includes coverage of the chief genealogical periodicals. Here, in each of the 3 volumes, one finds indexes on certain families, rather than individual names, so more searching may be required. But try it!

Encyclopedia of American Quaker Genealogy by W. W. Hinshaw. Published volumes cover Virginia, North Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania; Indiana records are in preparation.

The Virginia Historical Index by E. G. Swem, lists personal names and places pertaining to Virginians.

The Pennsylvania Magazine has a detailed index for the first 75 volumes.

Munsell's Index to American Genealogies and Lists of Titles of Genealogical Articles in American Periodicals and Kindred Works are two older books which are still useful.

All names in The Detroit Society for Genealogical Research Magazine are indexed periodically. (See the Roster Page if you wish to obtain one.)

There are many other indexes to help you. Take time to learn about them -- and also to do some indexing. The Flint Genealogical Society is to be congratulated on their current project of indexing queries and answers in The Hartford Times. Another Michigan index has been started by Mr. John Curry and his mother, Mrs. V. Manning Curry, of Lansing, who are indexing all names in various county histories. When the master index is installed at the State Library, one should be able to pinpoint the locality for that elusive ancestor who "lived in Michigan", if said ancestor was ever mentioned in a Michigan book.

Many people are appreciating the need for indexes; many are working at it. Now -- if we could only have someone step forward and offer to index all the indexes, wouldn't that be perfect? Any volunteers?

JOSEPH DOANE OF NEW YORK AND MICHIGAN

The parentage of Joseph Doane is unknown to this compiler. He was born in Dutchess Co., N.Y. ca 1772/73; d. Oakland Co., Mich., 1847, 74 years. He m. ca 1796 Esther Markham, b. N.Y. state ca 1778; d. 1851, 73 years. They were living in Cato, Cayuga Co., N.Y. in October 1818, when Joseph bought land from John Myric of Washington, Dutchess Co., New York. By 1833 Joseph and a son Alexander-2 with his family, were residents of Lyon Twp., Oakland Co., Territory of Michigan. Another son, Erastus-2, was in Livingston County in 1834. One record names a son, Robert, b. Mass. 1805, settled in Washtenaw Co., Mich., and a dau., Laura.

Erastus-2 Doane, b. N.Y. state ca 1798; d. Livingston Co., Mich. 1861. In 1834, he migrated from Wayne Co., N.Y. to Livingston Co., Territory of Michigan. He m. in N.Y. state Hester Stringham, b. 1802/03; d. 1883, dau. of Henry and Jemima Stringham. Their children were: (1) Rebecca, d.bef.1850, unmar.; (2) Jemima, b. N.Y. state 1827/8; m. 1st William Webb; m. 2nd, Randall Colvin; (3) Joseph, b. Wayne Co., N.Y., 1830. m. Jane Corson; (4) John Westley, b. Ontario Co., (?) N.Y., 1833; m. 1st, Lucinda Packard; m. 2nd, Martha Packard; m. 3rd, Minnie L. Mey; (5) Robert, b. 1835/36; d. unmar.; (6) Henry, b. 1836/37; (7) Elnathan, b. 1839/40; m. Sylvia Doane, dau. of Alexander-2; and (8) Mary, b. 1841/42; m. Richard Peer.

Alexander-2 Doane, b. ca 1803/04; d. Oakland Co., Mich., 1887. In 1833, he migrated from Wayne Co., N.Y. to Oakland Co., Territory of Michigan. He m. 1st, at Cato, Cayuga Co., N.Y., 1827, Harriet A. Parker, b. 1810/11; m. 2nd, Oakland Co., Mich., Mrs. Pinnula ---. Children of Alexander and Harriet A. (Parker) Doane were: (1) Esther A., b. 1828; m. 1861; Thomas A. Gordon; (2) Harrison Parker, b. Wayne Co., N.Y., 1830; m. Frances ---; (3) Laura S., b. N.Y. state, 1832; m. 1855, Joseph Thayer; (4) Anna A., b. Oakland Co., Mich., 1834; m. Albert Angell; (5) Sarepta, b. 1838, unmar.; (6) Amity, b. 1841; m. 1862, Thomas N. Lee, Jr.; (7) Sylvia L., b. 1844; m. 1866, Elnathan Doane, son of Erastus-2 Doane; and (8) Harriet A., b. 1846; m. 1873, Arthur Johnson.

In the search for clues to the parentage of Joseph Doane, it would seem the possibilities must originate from Doane families of Putnam and/or Dutchess counties, New York. He might be a grandson, or otherwise related to Elnathan-4 Doane, b. Eastham, Mass., 1709; m. Eastham, 1737, Martha Paddock, prob. dau. of Robert and Martha (Hall) Paddock. Elnathan's name appears on Eastham records in 1752. After that date, he settled at Doanesburgh, Putnam Co., New York (formerly Frederickstown, Dutchess County). He and a son, Elnathan, were tenants on a farm there in 1778. Inasmuch as the record of the children of Elnathan-4 as found in The Doane Family, by A. A. Doane, pp. 74 and 75, is probably incomplete, the compiler is seeking information concerning them and their descendants. Known children were: (1) Debro, b. 1739; (2) Daniel, b. 1741; and (3) Elnathan, b. ca 1747.

Published records of the Doanesburgh Cemetery do not cite inscriptions for Elnathan-4 and Martha. There is one which reads, "Pheebe, wife of Mr. Elnathan Doane, who departed this life June 10, 1788, ae 81." There is also the record of a Ruth Doane, who d. 1823, 79 years. Is it possible that Pheebe, b. ca 1706/07 was 2nd wife of Elnathan-4? Was Ruth, b. ca 1744, his daughter? Pheebe died the same day as Pheebe (Griffin) Doane, wife of Elnathan-5.

Elnathan-5 Doane, d. 1806, 59 years, buried in Doanesburgh Cemetery. He m. (1) Phoebe Griffin, b. 1755/56; d. 1788; m. (2) Deborah Penny, b. 1752/53; d. 1823. Search of Doane estates in the Putnam County Surrogate's Office shows five sons: Edmond, Zenas, Benjamin, Demas, and Elnathan.

Enumerated in the 1790 Federal Census, Dutchess Co., Frederickstown, was Ruth Doane with two males over 16 years of age. The grave-stone of one Ruth Doane reads, "relict of Reuben", d. 1801, 69 years. This was probably the same Ruth shown in the 1800 Census in the household of her son Joshua, and a neighbor of Reuben, Jr. Listed in the 1790 Census of Frederickstown, was an Elizabeth Doane with four sons and two daughters; and in Pawling, Dutchess Co., was Daniel Doane with four sons and two daughters.

Exchange of information on the DOANE lines of Putnam, Dutchess, Cayuga, and Wayne Counties, N. Y., and/or related Doane lines, as well as MARKHAM, of N.Y., would be appreciated by Mrs. Loren W. Remington, 733-31st Street, S. E., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

REPORT OF MEETINGS

Roy E. McFee

For our meeting of April 11, members and guests came through sunshine to fill the hall again. The entire program was a talk, "Anneke Jans Bogardus and her Descendants," by Mr. Garnett McCoy of the Burton Historical Collection staff. He held rapt attention with the life story and inheritance battles of this famed woman and descendants. Incidentally, the speaker early announced that he himself is not a descendant.

Mystery surrounds the parentage and girlhood of Anneke Jans Bogardus. There is no agreement even as to her family name. Legend would make her a granddaughter of William of Orange, King of Holland, but such lineage has not been proved.

She married Roelof Jans, a farmer in Holland, about 1622. In 1630 they and their three children came to the Hudson River Valley. He became the overseer on a farm of the Kililaen Van Rensselaer estate. In 1636 they and their increased family of five children moved to Manhattan. There Jans was given a farm of 62 acres, but he died in a year, leaving Anneke with the children, and with the property, of course.

Two years afterward she married Everardus Bogardus, a minister, and by him had four sons. She soon found that she had a husband who was constantly in trouble. He had no inhibition of speech, and repeatedly challenged the Governor from the pulpit. That aroused official replied by having drums beaten at the church door during services and even causing a cannon to be fired there. In 1646 Reverend Bogardus started back to visit Holland, but was lost in shipwreck. This left his wife with nine children by her two marriages. She moved up the Hudson to Albany, and died in 1663. A Jans daughter had died by then, reducing the children to eight.

Her will provided that the farm should be sold, and 1000 guilders of the price divided between the four remaining Jans children. The rest of the estate was to be divided between the entire eight. By this time, of course, the English had taken New Netherlands from the Dutch. But the title to Anneke's farm had been confirmed by the incoming English Governor. In 1671 the children sold the farm to Governor Francis Lovelace. Cornelius Bogardus, a son, had then died. The deed omitted the name of either his widow or son. This was later used as the basis for claim to the land by his further descendants -- the ones who started the trouble.

Meanwhile the farm was expropriated by the Duke of York, who later became King James II, as payment for a debt owed by Lovelace. Next, it passed to the King's daughter when she became Queen Anne. The land was leased to Trinity Church and others. Then, in 1705, the Queen herself gave it outright to Trinity.

Until 1746 no descendant of Anneke ever questioned the title of Trinity Church. But that year Jacob Brower, a descendant of Cornelius Bogardus, moved upon the land and was evicted. In 1749 he sued Trinity, with others probably backing him as an anti-church movement with anti-British feeling. Thomas Jones, Tory historian, called Brower "a poor, stupid, ignorant, illiterate Dutchman."

Finally in 1760 the suit was settled in favor of Trinity. But in 1773 a new Cornelius Bogardus moved onto the land with relatives. Violence and court maneuvers continued for years. Fences were burned and a first meeting of heirs called. Another legal action was in 1830, by John Bogardus, son of this Cornelius. He was the first to ask contributions from other heirs. In 1847 came a clear decision in favor of Trinity. After all, that Church had held the property for nearly 150 years.

However, the lost case dragged on until 1931. Family associations were formed. Tremendous sums were collected -- even from descendants of children other than Cornelius, who could not have profited from any judgment. This in itself was fraud. Lawyers were indicted for so using the mails, and finally one was convicted. This ended the Anneke Jans Bogardus case, with only rumors since.

The property of course is lower Manhattan Island, and is of fabulous value.

The program of May 9 was unique in being a panel discussion on the subject, "Problems of Beginners in Genealogy." The capable moderator was Miss Alice D. Serrell, and the participants, in order, were: Mr. M. S. Harlan, Mrs. Neil Romeo, Mrs. M. S. Harlan, Mr. Arthur Booth and Mrs. Celia Freiberg. It was a program that sparkled with competent speaking throughout. Sincerity and forthrightness were blended with humor and fun. A responsive audience quickly sensed that the five members on the platform were being somewhat modest about their early successes in genealogy.

Mr. Harlan mentioned his newness in genealogy, by saying, "About all I know how to do is to go to the library and pull down books." However, it soon appeared that he has really been making excellent progress. His early Harlans and their wives were Quakers, who came to Pennsylvania with William Penn's colony in the Sixteen Hundreds. His Freed ancestors came to Columbiana County, Ohio. Chalkley Harlan married Nancy Freed, and they became his ancestors. Nancy's parents were Peter Freed and Rebecca Caldwell, but of Rebecca he knows little. Smilingly he said with rightful pride, "The Caldwells, of course, won the Revolutionary War singlehandedly." Many of his women ancestors are known to him only by first names. "But all are described as charming women." He accepted Mrs. Wilson McTeer's offer to show the use of Burton's microfilm reader.

Mrs. Romeo said gracefully, "I am really a beginner. All these other people have already begun." She told about her first frustrations in research, including disappointments at libraries outside Detroit proper. Then she wrote to the Detroit News and was referred to the Burton Historical Collection, where she learned about our Society. She attended a meeting and joined. She and our Editor, Miss Lucy Mary Kellogg, later met and had lunch together. Mrs. Romeo's problems are the ancestries of a great-great-great-grandfather, John Taylor Temple, born in Virginia; and of a great-grandfather, William Montgomery, said to have been a Philadelphian. He had a brother, George. A supposed ancestor, Sir William Temple, proved to have had three sons only, all of whom died without issue. "So he was a failure as an ancestor."

Mrs. Harlan at once named Mrs. Milford H. Hicks as a good friend and helper. She spoke in particular about her Tafts in Vermont. Her research has begun with a great-uncle, Daniel Taft, of whom she early found record. Daniel's brother, John Taft, married Cynthia King in 1826, and this couple became her grandparents. Their children were: Lee, Charles (who died young) and Lily Eliza. John and Cynthia (King) Taft came from Richmond and Huntington, Vermont, but finally moved to Michigan. Some of their children later lived in Pittsford, Vermont. Mrs. Harlan's definite problem now is the ancestry of John Taft. It was suggested that she write to the Pittsford Postmaster, or to a Mayor or Town Historian. Miss Sarah Van Hoosen Jones said that in Romeo, Michigan, resides a Mrs. Taft, clear of mind as she nears the age of one hundred.

Mr. Booth announced that he is now finding time for two interests he has always had. These are history and travel. A relative once told him, "People know more about their cattle's ancestry than about their own," and gave him an ancestor chart for registering a thoroughbred calf. Mr. Booth continued, "After that, I did not have anything to do with genealogy for a while. Then I finally got started. I would not let anybody look up anything for me. A professional may have the experience, but I shall gain that by doing it myself." He has a check system, so that he needs to go through a source only once. "I try to exhaust the source the first time. The material may not be there next time, and I may not either." He is interested in the Rice, King, and Sperry families, and has followed their footsteps in Cayuga County, New York.

Mrs. Freiberg said she had always known of her ancestor, Silas Stevens, from Brookfield, Massachusetts. A son, Silas, Jr., went to Cayuga County, New York. She had heard of an old Stevens cemetery there, on the back of a farm near Port Byron. So she went to Cayuga County, but obtained no help at the Courthouse. A distant cousin, Mr. Gail Jones, helped her to find the cemetery. She engaged a woman resident to copy all the inscriptions, receiving them just a few days before our very meeting. Her Grandmother Stevens had grandparents John and Jane (Brown) McDonald, whose graves have been found in Cass County, Michigan. Jane Brown is said to be from the family of John Brown of Harper's Ferry, although the exact relationship is not yet known. At this point Mrs. Freiberg exclaimed, "And this, May 9, is John Brown's birthday!"

The panel had its dramatic moments while on the platform. Mr. Booth heard that our Mrs. Edgar M. Montgomery also is deeply interested in the Rice family. He and Mrs. Freiberg learned they had met the same woman in central New York. And Mrs. Harlan and Mrs. Freiberg found they are both working on Stevens families.

In the tradition dating from our early days, members and guests met on June 13 for another enjoyable picnic. The place was Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, at Dearborn, where American history and ancestral culture are preserved with a charm always new. The day was bright on the landscaping, fittingly composed of fine American elms, thornapples, sumacs, and wild grape vines. Everyone had his choice of seeing either the Museum or the Village, and some visited both. The food was delightful. With exhibits constantly growing, there was much to exult over, however often a person had been there. The transportation division is immense, with its mammoth Chesapeake and Ohio steam locomotive for wondering children of the future, and its collection of automobiles, beginning with a miniature of the first one in 1885. There are farm implements, restored homes, and fine arts. Groups separated into individuals, each going his enthusiastic way, all to gather again for more adventures. We stayed nearly to closing time, and left the building with reluctance. Outside, flowers and foliage were in the softer light. At last we drove away, with the sun sinking in the west, and the clock tower throwing its lengthening shadow across the lawns and hedgerows.

NOTES AND NEWS

New officers, elected at the May meeting, will be installed September 12th, at the regular meeting of the DSGR. They and the new Committee Chairmen are listed on the Roster Page (opposite p. 1). The new 1959-60 year opens briskly with two special events scheduled: an "orientation course" for newer members has been arranged by the Library Committee for September 19th, to be given in cooperation with the staff of the Burton Historical Collection; and on October 24th, the 2nd day of the 2nd Conference on Local History Participation, MISS DOROTHY CHURCHILL BARCK of the New York Historical Association at Cooperstown will introduce us to some of the special problems encountered in research in that state. Mark your calendars; don't miss these dates.

MILDRED TAYLOR attended one of the courses on genealogy at the Cooperstown Seminars in July and the NEIL CAMERONS returned for more advanced study. At the Institute of Genealogical Research in Washington, the DSGR was represented by both secretaries, IDA JONES KENNINGS and EVA M. HARMISON. (If we can just capture some of their enthusiasm on paper for this Magazine, we'll all benefit from their summer.) Another Michiganer at the Institute was John Curry, about whose pet project you will read in "Give and Take". We understand his plans for a master index of Michigan county histories have been announced to several groups and more will be invited to join.

Death came suddenly on June 24th to DOROTHY V. MARTIN, Curator of Manuscripts in Burton Historical Collection. Born in Elyria, Ohio 52 years ago, Miss Martin held her degrees from Ohio State and the University of Illinois. She had lived in Cincinnati and Washington, D.C., where she was Curator of Manuscripts at The National Archives, before coming to Detroit 8 years ago. She had addressed DSGR meetings several times and her death is a personal loss to those of us who knew and worked with her.

The sympathy of the Society is also extended to the families of other members, whom we have lost recently through death. These include ...

MRS. ILDA JENNINGS PLUMB, who died in Detroit last March. She had been a member of DSGR since 1953.

FRED W. GRISWOLD of Bath, Michigan had been a member for 5 years before his death in April. He was one of the founders of the Michigan Society of Founders and Patriots.

DR. FRED A. FLETT of Detroit had been active in this Society since 1955. In his genealogical research he had visited Scotland and its Orkney Islands and had done extensive work there and also in Canadian records. It was a great disappointment to him (and to your editors) that Dominion regulations did not permit us to publish a ship-list he had contributed for the DSGR Magazine.

MRS. P. B. DAVIS, when taken ill in June, had barely returned to her home in Charleston, Illinois from a visit to her daughter in Detroit, Mrs. Wilson McTeer. Mrs. Davis was well-known to many of our members through her frequent visits in Detroit.

MRS. PERNA MAE HUTCHINSON LUNDT of Blair, Nebraska also died in June, survived by her husband, B. F. Lundt. She was an alumna of the University of Nebraska and was keenly interested in genealogy and actively working on it for many years.

It happened in June! The MAURICE FOXES spent ten days in Los Angeles, attending a church convention. Another traveler was KEITH ETCHER who spoke on genealogy before two sessions of a conference in Toronto. Our favorite topic undoubtedly came up when the MILFORD HICKSES joined the M. S. HARLANS and their son at the recent luncheon of Mayflower Descendants in Michigan. MRS. CHARLES ROMANOWITZ of Alameda, Cal. is Senior President of the California C.A.R. this year and MRS. CLAUDE FLANDERS is still working on those elusive Shipmans in Salt Lake City; so learned your editor while vacationing in the Far West. It was good to see the Grand Ledge LEVERINGTONS at our picnic.

HELEN MOULTON MEANWELL "wuz robbed" in Volume 22; her faithful work in helping to copy those Monroe County Marriages went unnoticed -- Ye Editor herewith apologizes! A credit line should also go to HOMER CLARK NYCUM of Kalamazoo and to the M. A. HARLANS for outstanding activity on charts. They take top honors among the 33 members who have turned in charts this past year. GEORGE BLOUNT admitted in the Royal Oak Daily Tribune that he is counting the days until he retires as City Electrician and can devote full time to genealogy. VIRGINIA EVERHAM will spend all her time on genealogy when she recovers from bursitis and moving. Right now, she's trying to fit 20,000 St. Clair County tombstones (the records, that is!) into a Detroit apartment. Looks like Port Huron's loss (and Royal Oak's in the future) will be Burton's gain. Don't miss the Introduction to "The Millards of Rehoboth" in this issue. While not so labeled, it is a real "finding aid" for anyone whose ancestors lived in Mass. and/or R.I.
